Direct from New York, David Carl returns to the Millibo Art Theatre (Gary Busey does Hamlet) for a three-night special production of a hilarious one-man show, playing an actor named Carl David who evokes the wrath of the President as he creates a solo version of King Lear—Shakespeare's tragic play of a ruler whose vanity tears his country apart. David Carl is an actor, comedian, and impressionist living in NYC and was recently nominated for a New York Innovative Theater Award for Solo Performance. We are thrilled to announce his return to the Millibo this year with another original piece—David Carl's "uproariously hilarious" (LES360) and critically-acclaimed (Time Out New York's Critic's Pick) Trump Lear is not to be missed! Only three chances to see this timely and captivating satire.

"Actor and impersonator, Carl David, is being held without bail for performing his Trump-inspired version of Shakespeare's King Lear. Carl David is forced to perform his King Lear to an unseen online audience of one, as the President restlessly watches remotely from a live and public feed. The stakes are high: if Trump likes Carl and his show, Carl lives. If not, Carl dies. But how can Carl get through a show where he has created a Lear based on Trump himself without offending the audience?"
